A “Stimulus Plan” for JVS

Consulting

Proposal

Develop a consulting model to augment JVS's employment network (JEN) as a low-cost service provider for businesses as part of community "stimulus" plan to deliver value for customers, community, and provide opportunities for unemployed resources in the community.

Current Challenges

- Community Challenges:
 - Unemployment remains high
 - Jobs may not return with the recovery
 - Taxes are rising along with service cuts to communities
 - Small business owners are struggling to survive
 - More highly skilled workers and executives are unemployed than ever
 - Many workers are under employed due to the realities of the economy.
 - Whole communities are under water and many villagers are struggling to fund entitlement programs and support families who are struggling.

““The basic assumption that jobs will eventually return when the economy recovers is probably wrong. Some jobs will come back, of course. But the reality that no one wants to talk about is a structural change in the economy that’s been going on for years but which the Great Recession has dramatically accelerated.”

- Redefining Health Care

Current Challenges

- JVS's Challenges
 - Funding has been cut
 - They have limited resources to assist communities
 - Employers don't necessarily look to JVS as a source for highly skilled workers
 - Due to funding issues, it's difficult for JVS to launch new programs for unemployed workers
- JUF's Challenges
 - Exponential growth in people seeking emergency assistance
 - Difficult to maintain current levels of services, given the increasing burden on existing funding sources

Solution

- Leverage JVS's employment network model and build out a basic consulting practice model:
 - Leverage a highly skilled workforce that is currently unemployed
 - Build credibility and deliver value to businesses in the local community
 - Provide revenue for unemployed workers who can gain new skills and potentially land new positions in other organization
 - Generate a small revenue stream to fund the program (initially) and develop/expand other programs (eventually)

Shift towards a Proactive Model

- Today
 - JVS provides education & training services and vocational assistance, where clients hope to obtain jobs.
- Tomorrow..
 - JVS provide opportunities to place clients in engagements, provide temporary services and higher levels of consulting services.

Benefits

- Create jobs (reduce unemployment) by directing investments (money) towards opportunities that deliver value to a well defined market.

“We are taught that we, the Jewish people function as a community. I believe that one person can make a difference but only the power and will of the collective can effectuate great change.”

- Harvey Barnett

- Position the MBC, JVS, and JUF as a center for opportunity (investment) and innovation (value delivery).
- Build a model for channeling creativity to deliver value for the local community while building core competencies that can be shared amongst the members.
- Build a pipeline of sustainable value for individuals, small business owners, local economy, and the government.

Expanding The Possible...

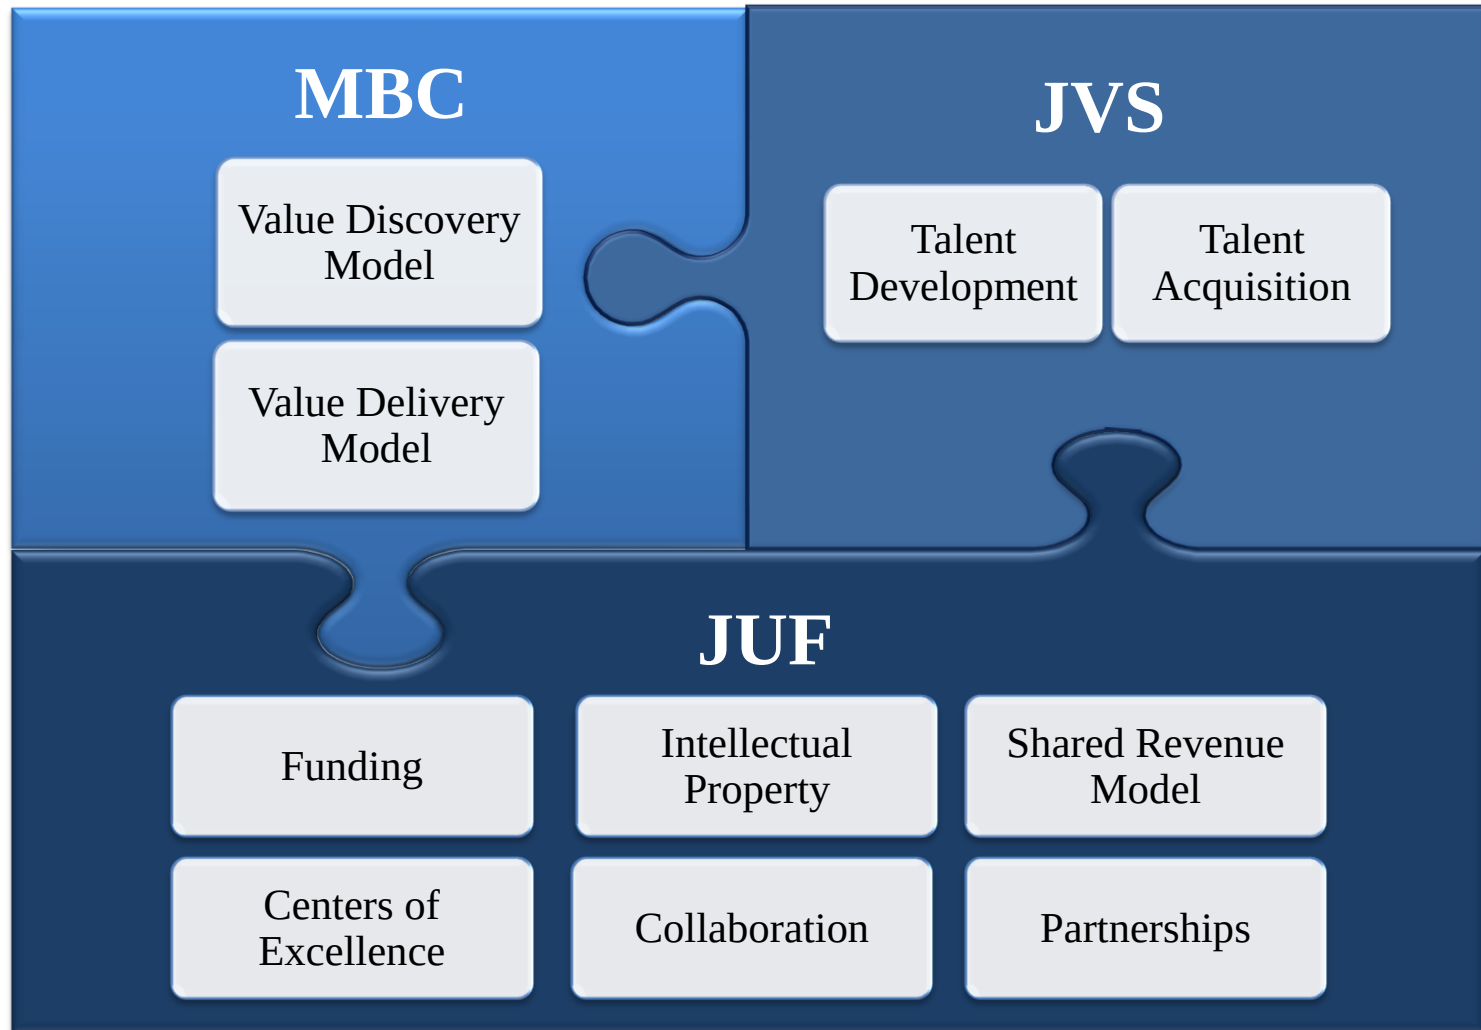

A More Expansive Future

“A vision for building a value-driven pipeline that sustains the community, expands JVS’s value, and helps underwrite JUF programs in the future.”

Evolving the JVS Practice Model

- Assuming JVS is successful with building a practice model in one or more of the communities it serves...
 - JVS may be in a position to take on larger, more ambitious projects
 - This could be a tipping point for JVS to create a more expansive goal of to build a business consortium in the Midwest (MBC).
 - There is precedence for these types of models as a new way to create opportunity. Read on...

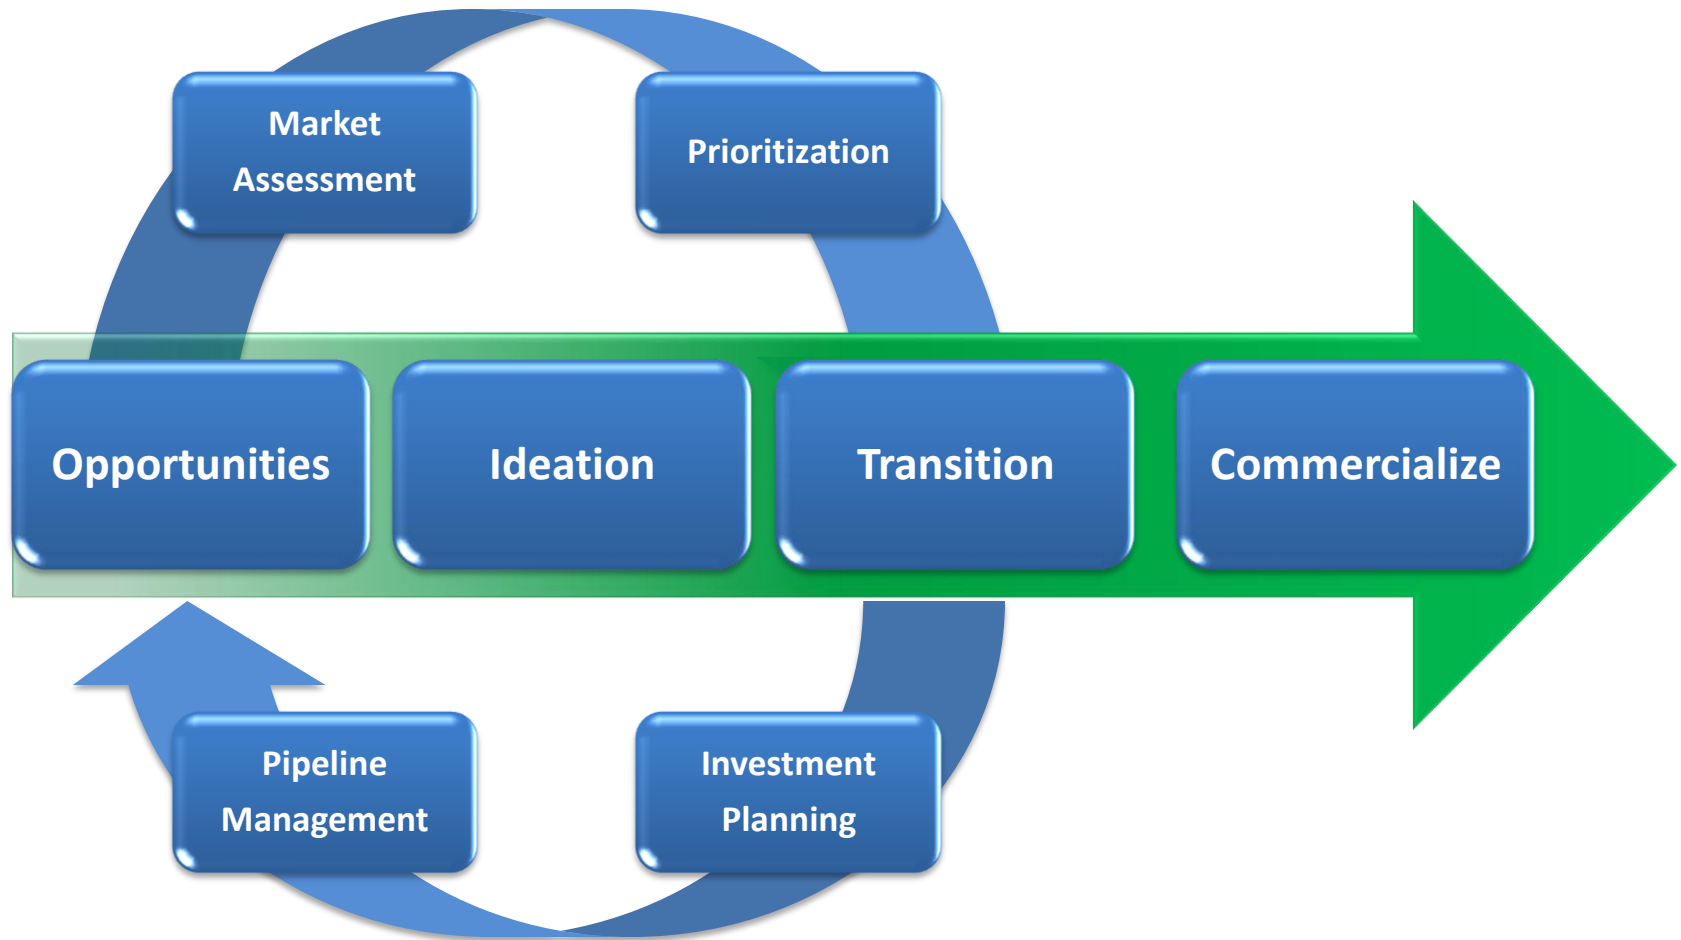

Vision

Tapping into a new growth model

- Collaborative commercialization strategies are being deployed in emerging markets. There are a growing number of these collaborative models springing up in all industries, many of which are based on the incubator model.
- One example is a model being deployed by Ireland's Technology sector has been creating new value for Ireland and is steadily growing and adding new investors .
- Here's a link to their site where you can read more about their model: <http://www.ititechmedia.com/index.aspx>

Value Delivery Pipeline

Developing a Value Delivery Pipeline

- The model is built on a progression of capabilities which are based on a clear understanding of the value that MBC Members need to deliver.
 - Those needs are captured as Desired Outcomes on the part of the customers (direct & indirect consumers).
 - The Desired Outcomes provide MBC with a repository of intellectual property from which to offer a variety of services to the practice, profession, and the public.
 - The Desired Outcomes will be used to drive alignment, provide MBC Members with a compass, and provide the baseline for delivering targeted value to stakeholders throughout the Midwest.

JVS's Opportunities

- Provide an independent & sustainable funding model.
- Provide a pull model for JVS to create opportunities for unemployed workers of all levels.
- Offer valuable experience & relevant skills in driving growth and innovation.
- Build a service model that can provide revenue for JVS as well as the talent pool available to JVS.
- Provide opportunities for small businesses.
- Expand the business model to deliver value not just resources to the market.

JUF's Opportunities

- Develop a revenue stream to underwrite existing programs and services.
- Reduce dependency on 3rd party funding.
- Increase relevancy amongst businesses and communities by offering tangible value.
- Extend the value proposition to adjacent business and municipalities.
- Create an value-driven model that can be extended throughout the US.
